Jake Coleman

Jake Coleman is a father, husband, leader, educator, coach and mentor. He has never wanted to just get by in life, he wants to make a difference. Jake has been involved with sports all of his life and wanted to share those possibilities by helping others.

Jake Coleman is not just the Varsity head coach at Cambridge-South Dorchester High, he is also an educator and mentor to his players. Jake started a tutoring program for his players with a 98 percent graduation rate. He is a positive role model and a father figure to many of his players. He also started the North-South Senior bowl, which brings all local seniors together to play football in front of college scouts. Not only does Jake go the extra mile for his students he is also involved with the Y as a youth basketball coach with his son. His dedication to helping others and his positive attitude set him at the top of the class, and makes him our choice for a Hometown Hero in 2015.

Cambridge Adventist Church Educator Award

Dr. Oluwale Olusola

Dr. O spent several weeks teaching the community about a better and more natural way of eating, and how it affects your health. The health seminars were free and open to anyone. He has completed two free seminars, one at St. Luke's Methodist Church and one at the Cambridge Seventh Day Adventist Church.

Both seminars had many community members attend. This type of free health education is invaluable and life changing, and presented easily and informatively by Dr. O. He is also writing a book about natural ways to cure the human body.

The health of our community is important and he has gone above and beyond to get the word out about positive ways of living. He is a Hometown Hero and is helping to change lives in Dorchester County.
